Nassau County is considering legislation to license locksmith shops.

Even after numerous requests, NYC's Department of Consumer Affairs still has not been able to give NYAIL any answers as to what happened to the three men who were found to be operating without locksmith licenses during a joint Sanitation and Consumer Affairs sticker sting several years ago.

With so many reports of bogus locksmiths ripping off consumers across the country, many consumer advocates are suggesting that customers check to see if a locksmith has a license before hiring them. That's excellent advice. Unfortunately, it's currently not possible to do that for a NYC locksmith. NYAIL has discussed this with Consumer Affairs and has been promised that the public will soon be able to look up locksmith licenses on the official nyc.gov website, although they could not and would not give any timetable as to when this might happen.

KABA-ILCO's Traveling Van will be at the Borough of Manhattan Community College on Monday, October 22 from 4:00 PM – 8:00 PM
